

A good onboard inventory of spare boat parts is a treasure chest. It's like having your own custom-built marine store at arm's reach at all times. Spare parts make crucial repairs possible and are essential equipment to carry. Experienced sailors cherish their spares and will happily make space for them aboard at the cost of room for other important things like surplus food and extra crew. You're going to need most everything on the spares list eventually, so the expense is justifiable. Wisely purchasing ahead is good seamanship.

Spare parts lists should be customized to match the boat. The list below serves as a good generic starting point:

Recommended Spare Parts Inventory

*Numbers refer to storage location on the boat storage map.
In no particular order, because you never know which spare you'll need next.*
